

FRANK MAYO'S DAUGHTER, DERONDA, A PLAYWRIGHT.

In Eighty Weeks of Stage Life She Has Taken Thirty Parts.

Miss Deronda Mayo, the ingenue in "The Bishop's Move," now at Mrs. Osborne's Playhouse on Forty-fourth street, comes by her talents naturally, for she is the daughter of the late Frank Mayo.

"I have been on the stage professionally just eighty weeks," remarked Miss Mayo when questioned recently concerning her career, "yet during that short period I have had thirty parts."

From childhood she has found her greatest amusement in writing stories, verses and plays. Her father gave her some training as a playwright, and it is said that the young woman has already completed a number of plays. On this subject, however, she is loath to speak, modestly asserting that she must work a long while yet before even thinking that she can write plays.

Newspaper work is another field in which Miss Mayo has had some experience, and she is still a contributor, at intervals, for various magazines and periodicals.

O'BRIEN DIVORCE JURY DISAGREES.

Was Out for Seven Hours Without Results, and Justice Scott
Orders New Trial on April 6.

The jury in the case of ex-Sheriff James O'Brien and Abbie Ella, his wife, who have been suing each other for a divorce with eighteen charges and counter charges, were unable to agree after seven hours' deliberation.

Neither O'Brien nor Mrs. O'Brien was in court to-day when this situation was announced by Justice Scott, and the jury was not in court.

The trial had lasted five days and thirty witnesses had testified.

The case must be tried all over again, and was set down for Monday, April 6.

Burden was introduced to the members of the company at the armory last night.

LIVED TO BE 102.
Former Negro Slave Who Survived
Skull Fracture Is Dead.

WASHINGTON, N. J., March 25.—George Washington, a former negro slave, died here yesterday. His relatives say they have records to show that he was 102 years old last December. He has lived in this section for more than seventy years. He personally solicited funds and got enough money to build the African church in this place. Five years ago he was assaulted by a negro boatman, who hit him over the head with a heavy spar. His skull was fractured, but he recovered and regained his faculties, which he kept until he died.

MORGAN DUPED BY ART FRAUD.

London Expert Says the Wall Street Banker Has Been Swindled Out of Thousands on Spurious Antiques.

THE LOUVRE CAUGHT, TOO.

PARIS, March 25.—J. Pierpont Morgan has been duped by the same art forgers who sold spurious antiquities to the custodians of the Louvre. An investigation started by Mr. Read, the curator of the British Museum, in London, proves that the American millionaire paid enormous sums for articles that are worth little. These things were offered to the British Museum by a man named Hochmann. They were refused by Mr. Read, who doubted their genuineness, and were turned over to Messrs. Spink, the London jewellers. Mr. Morgan was induced then to buy them, it is said. The same forger sold to the Louvre what he purported to be the "Tiara Saitapharnes." The crown had been on exhibition for some time, when curators of the museum decided it was a counterfeit and withdrew it. They paid Hochmann $40,000 for it.

Brewster, seventeen years old, of the same address. The young man is slight in build, weighing 125 pounds, and is five feet five inches tall. He is of dark complexion, brown hair and eyes. He wore a dark coat and trousers. He has been missing since March 18.
